

I subscribed to Indiana's "no-call" list a year ago when I first heard of it. The outcome has been tremendous. Previous to being on the list, we would receive at LEAST 3 phone calls each evening with solicitations of various kinds. Most often these calls were right around dinnertime which is an hour that my family (like most others) holds precious as our only time of day we spend together. The interruption was using up our time as well as being stressful. I do not like to be rude or insensitive to other human beings but their persistence and constant interruption would ultimately cause me to hang up. Since placing our names on the list, we have received NO calls of solicitation and it is heavenly! Please do not take any action that would change Indiana's current regulation or lower any standards so that we once again will be disturbed by uninvited callers to our home. Thank you
